A hilarious,
hard-hitting and utterly human one-man show!

Join Jack Bryan – former steelworker, shop steward and police officer – for a rollercoaster journey through three decades of modern British history.

From the pain of redundancy just before Christmas and the impending birth of his second child, to the line of the police during a time of massive change. Jack's story is a unique and unforgettable account of a life lived through some of the most turbulent years in recent history.

With grit, honesty and humour, he recounts the race riots of the early 1980s, the miners' strike of 1984-85, and the decimation of British industry under globalisation and Thatcher.

It's a passionate, often shocking, but always entertaining insight into the "psychotic Narnia" of police culture – told by someone who was really there.

"From the beat to the breakdown, ex-detective Jack Bryan doesn't just tell a story; he lives it. Brace yourself for a tragi-comic journey through modern British policing that's so vivid you'll feel every laugh and every surge of fury right alongside him"
